Recently, the National Health Authority (NHA) and the All India Transporters Welfare Association (AITWA) have announced a partnership through a memorandum of understanding (MoU). This partnership aims to provide healthcare services to around 10 million truck drivers under the Ayushman Bharat (AB)-Pradhan Mantri Jan Arogya Yojana (PM-JAY). The NHA and the AITWA will work together in order to identify truck drivers and employees of transport companies who are eligible for the scheme. The Common Service Centres (CSCs), which comes under the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology, will work toward facilitating the verification of drivers using the NHA's Beneficiary Identification System. This collaboration will help thousands of eligible families access in-patient care for serious illnesses at a nationwide network of 19,002 government and private hospitals empanelled under the PM-JAY. After the verification, the eligible drivers can get their AB PM-JAY e-cards at the nearest AITWA Highway Hero Centres. In the first phase, a pilot project will be conducted at key locations under the AITWA and the AB PM-JAY. This will be expanded to other towns across the country. Eligible drivers and employees of different transport companies will be able to avail themselves of the benefits after getting the PM-JAY cards. NHA officials will work closely with the teams of the AITWA and the CSCs to conduct the drive to identify beneficiaries.

We have a fairly good account of the panchayats of olden times from several Chola and Pandya inscriptions of South India. According to these inscriptions, each village or a group of village formed a community which was the lowest unit of self-government. There was an assembly for each such community, which was either elected by the people or consisted of the village. This assembly looked after the whole administration of the village under the supervision of the king's officers. It was in charge of several functions, such as the maintenance of all public works and temples, law and order of the village, trial of all cases and disputes except serious crimes, administration of charities and trusts, regulation of markets, etc. It looked after all these functions by having a number of committees, each in charge of a particular work. The members of these committees were elected from among good and qualified people, and every individual had a chance of serving on these committee, as only those who had not been on any of these committees for the previous three years were to be chosen. You will be glad to know how much we were advanced in democratic self-government in those days if I tell you that there were cases of even ladies serving on some of those committees.

- Where from can we have an account of the panchayats of olden times?
- What were the duties of an assembly working under a community?
- How did the assembly carry out its duties?
- What provision was made to get on the committees every individual of the village?
- What proves the democratic nature of the old village communities?
